About PREPPed

The Post-bac/graduate Research Edification & Preparedness for PhD in Education (PREPPed) program is a six-week residential mentoring program focused on research under the umbrella of ethnic minority studies. This year's research focus will be Black mental health in clinical and educational contexts. PREPPed provides scholars with the requisite skills in research and the hidden curriculum of academia needed to achieve doctoral studies admission. Participating scholars will receive housing on our Homewood campus and a weekly stipend for the duration of the program.
