

RACIAL JUSTICE CONCERT SERIES

Part 3

October 5th
12pm-1pm

AFRO HOUSE

The Racial Justice Concert Series (RJCS), a collaboration among Johns Hopkins students, faculty and staff, harnesses the power of music to bring awareness to issues of racism in Baltimore, and to support Baltimore organizations that focus on racial justice work. The RJCS features performances by Baltimore musicians and provides a platform for racial justice organizations to educate audiences about their efforts.

COVID-safe performances will be hosted by Baltimore's own Creative Alliance and livestreamed to a virtual audience. Tickets are free and may be obtained at <https://racialjusticeconcertseries.eventbrite.com>.
